World Renown

WILEY POST, pictured below, famous for his around-the-world flights in the 1930s, was born 125 years ago this month near Grand Saline, east of Dallas. Post, credited with discovering the jet stream, twice set speed records for circling the globe. The celebrated adventurer, born November 22, 1898, perished with close friend Will Rogers in a plane crash in Alaska in 1935.

Glorious Overtones

Pamela Dawson, choir director at DeSoto High School, south of Dallas, won a Grammy Music Educator Award in February—a lofty honor for a teacher whose students have performed at Carnegie Hall in New York City and have landed on Broadway.

"I am this lady from Detroit, Michigan, who just loves music and wants to impart that into my students," says Dawson, who began at DeSoto in 2006.

"Happiness is having a large, loving, caring, close-knit family in another city."

TEXAS' STRONG TIES to the moon are indisputable. After all, the world listened in as Neil Armstrong uttered these words during the Apollo 11 mission July 20, 1969: "Houston, Tranquility Base here. The Eagle has landed."

Now, as NASA prepares to send astronauts back to the moon and establish a long-term presence there, the agency has contracted Austin 3D printing firm Icon to launch construction technologies for lunar landing pads, habitats and roads.

Closer to home, Icon has been creating 3D-printed houses and military barracks using gigantic robotic printers that layer the company's proprietary concrete mix.

COWBOY POETRY devotees ensure a Western tradition continues to find rapt audiences pint-size poet steps up to a microphone stand that towers over her. It's a February morning in far West Texas as Bethia Baize, 5, recites The Well-Used Cayuse, inspired by her horse. Emcee Karen McGuire holds the mic at the kindergartener's height. Bethia speaks softly, from memory, to a rapt audience in a Sul Ross State University lecture hall, her voice and words kicking off a youth poetry contest. When she's finished, the room thunders with applause, and Bethia claims the firstplace plaque for her age group.

For the rest of the session, which is one of dozens at the annual Lone Star Cowboy Poetry Gathering in Alpine, the energy in the room is electric. Parents, grandparents and other supporters fill every seat and line the walls as 16 young poets recite their award-winning works about cattle and coyotes, cowboys and cowgirls, and the rhythms of ranch life. The room pulses with pride, love and nerveslike a spelling bee, but giddier and more exuberant.

Bethia's aunt, Elizabeth Baize, a member of the poetry gathering's board of directors, co-hosted the youth poetry contest with McGuire, also a board member. In the weeks before the event, Baize visits area schools to spur students to enter. She encourages them to talk with older relatives who might have ranch life experience and to look at photographs or paintings that might inspire them to write a story in the form of a poem.

"Poetry is a language of the heart. It's a language of emotion. Prose is language, but poetry is what sears it into our being."

t's no mean feat winnowing down the annual crop of entries to the winners. As the judges read the entries, "there are giggles and good belly laughs, tears and sniffles, and 'Oh my, listen to this!' "McGuire says. The future of cowboy poetry is in good hands. McGuire and Baize—and scores of organizers and volunteers—work hard to ensure that future. They helped stage this year's gathering, which drew north of 2,200 attendees and featured 40-plus performers of cowboy poetry, which encompasses music, spoken-word poetry and storytelling by ranch hands, cowboys and cowgirls and has been enshrined as an oral tradition by Library of Congress folklorists.

In North America, the Texas gathering is second in size only to the National Cowboy Poetry Gathering in Elko, Nevada, according to Bob Saul, the gathering's volunteer event producer. This year's event delivered at least five times as many free performances and sessions as ticketed ones. That's by design, Saul says.

"We want people to come. Some of the cowboy poetry gatherings have gone to all paid; there's nothing free you can go to," Saul, 79, says. "But our board has decided that we're going to carry on the tradition and the mission, that we will do our best to provide cowboy poetry, as much of it as possible, free of charge.

"In other words, it's for ranching families."

In 2019, Saul was in the audience at the Texas Cowboy Poetry Gathering (the original iteration of the event in Alpine) when it was announced that that year's gathering would be the last. Saul immediately began canvassing for volunteers to keep the event, or some semblance of it, alive.

"I just started talking to people and asking if they would be willing to help, if we could get it restarted, would they volunteer," Saul says. "And I came back to Fort Worth after two days with 142 email addresses in my pocket."

Over several months, Bob and his wife, Nancy Saul, a graphic designer who creates the gathering's annual programs, made more than a dozen 15-hour round trips between their North Texas home and Alpine to help the new gathering find its footing. Those pilgrimages were rooted in a deep affinity.

"Poetry is a language of the heart," Saul says. "It's a language of emotion. Prose is language, but poetry is what sears it into our being. And today poetry is mostly academic. You don't hear, like you used to, people going to hear people quote poetry; except when you go hear the fishermen and the miners and the loggers and the cowboys.

"Those kinds of industries, where people are working long hours and they are more alone, they've got time to think. And they've got time to sing. And they've got time to recite to themselves."

hat reverence reverberates across the gathering, which takes place the third weekend in February. At sessions with names like Western Harmony, Ranch Women and Working Ranch Families, audiences are focused and present, bearers of a quietude punctuated only by bursts of applause or laughter. Almost every cellphone is out of sight, every eye on the performers. Those wearing cowboy hats are kindly asked to remove them so as not to obstruct the view for others.

Kay Nowell, co-chair of the gathering, describes the genre as a celebration of a tradition and a way of life. "What cowboy poetry is is real," she says. "People get taken into rural people's life, and they get to experience it through their poems and their songs. It's a culture that adheres to a code." Nowell has conformed to that code for decades. She was a featured poet at the National Cowboy Poetry Gathering in 1989, which led to an appearance on The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson, where she recited her poem A What??!!

A chuck wagon breakfast kicks off each day of the Alpine gathering. This year temperatures stay below freezing as Alpine Lions Club members serve scrambled eggs and biscuits and gravy in the peaceful Poet's Grove at Kokernot Park. Cups of coffee skate across iced-over tables as the sun crests a hill, and a blazing firepit and easy conversation

The spirit of camaraderie and mindful attention extends to the gathering's open mic sessions, another free daily offering open to the public. Musicians and spoken-word performers sign up in advance, wait for their names to be called and then amble down to speak, sing or play their piece. Jan Hartman is up first Friday and plays Amazing Grace and taps on her fife.

The instrument "has its own sweet sound, I think," Hartman says. "It has more of a country sound than an orchestra sound." Hartman, who lives in Alpine and has participated in the open mic for the past five years, says she still gets nervous before she plays. It's worth it, though.

"It makes you stand out a little bit, just to be able to play before some people, and be able to tell a testimony or a story or, there again, a poem that you've heard," Hartman says. "So it just makes you feel a little special."

ne of the musicians Hartman most looks forward to each year is Kristyn Harris, who first appeared at the gathering's open mic more than a decade ago. The singer and yodeler, songwriter, swing rhythm guitarist, and winner of multiple International Western Music Association awards performed in several sessions at this year's event.

"The audiences here are really here to soak it up, and you really connect with them," says Harris, a Burleson resident and member of United Cooperative Services, an electric cooperative in the Metroplex. "Rather than just performing for people, it's like sharing your art, sharing yourself

Nevada rancher Waddie Mitchell has been a performing poet for decades. and sharing your history." In a Saturday afternoon show, Harris covers the jazz standard All of Me in a Western Swing style on the heels of Juni Fisher's spare, moving rendition of Simon and Garfunkel's folk classic The Boxer. The talent on display is dizzying, the audience enraptured, and the trio onstage—with poet Amy Hale emceeing—exude a sisterhood in their banter and backing of each other.

"I've played festivals that are festivals, and then the gathering is different," Harris says. "There are performers here that I really look up to, that I could see as celebrities, but here no one is a big celebrity."

Loren Schooley, a musician from Marfa who works in information technology and performs at Friday's open mic, echoes that sentiment. "Usually you go to a gig, and then you see the band or two, and then that's it," Schooley says. "But here it's almost like a conference. You never know what you're going to step into if you go into some of these rooms. And when you find the sweet spot—I've shed more tears here and laughter. You just can't get that anywhere else."

The gathering's performers are similarly compelled. "The best way I can describe it is it's family," Harris says. "There's a big, big, big Texas spirit about this gathering that's also different from some other poetry gatherings that are in other parts of the country. Everyone is just so Texan: friendly, wants to give you a big hug and just gives you that warm feeling."

The sweet spots and Texas spirit alchemize into what Nowell calls magic sessions. "They're intoxicating," she says. "A lot of times when I've been in one you just throw away your setlist and feed off the last guy's stuff. And it's all one piece. A lot's going on up there on that stage, and the audience feels it, and they're taken along on the ride. But the performers are having a blast."

Community investment helps sustain that improvisation. "Volunteers are critical to this," Nowell says. "We can't put this on without support from members and support from sponsors."

Tradition and fortitude are woven into the gathering's rough-hewn fabric. "The Lone Star is bound and determined to keep it cowboy," Nowell says. "Weather, government, markets; it's a hard life. But it's something people want to raise their children in."

MESSAGE FROM GENERAL MANAGER

KATHI CALVERT

We're Thankful for Your Membership

AUTHOR WILLIAM ARTHUR WARD once said, "Feeling gratitude and not expressing it is like wrapping a present and not giving it."

In the spirit of those wise words, I'd like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude for your membership in our cooperative. Because of your connection to Houston County Electric Cooperative, we're able to make our community a better place.

During this season of giving thanks, I think it's important to let you know the impact you have on our co-op and the greater community, likely in ways you may not even realize.

As part of the cooperative business model, one of our core principles is Concern for Community. While our priority is always to provide safe, reliable and affordable energy, we take pride in our role in the community as a catalyst for good. co-op through your membership and through your participation in and support of these programs.

When you attend co-op events, alert us to problems, or provide suggestions online or to our employees, you help us improve operations and thereby better serve the membership at large.

Because we're locally governed by members of our community, we have a firsthand perspective on community priorities, better enabling us to make more informed decisions on long-term investments, such as equipment and technology upgrades.

We're thankful that our board members carve out time to attend important training sessions, participate in planning meetings and keep abreast of industry trends. This investment of time results in better informed advisers who serve the co-op's interests in a way that our members expect and deserve.

On a more personal note, we appreciate the countless acts of kindness toward our lineworkers and other employees when they're working in severe weather and dangerous conditions. Our employees are thankful for your patience and consideration when we're trying to restore power during challenging situations.

Houston County EC was originally established 84 years ago to bring electricity to our area when no one else would. The co-op is a reflection of our local community

We are purposeful in partnering with local charitable organizations to help those in need.

We work closely with local schools to provide safety demonstrations, award college scholarships and host our ETREYS summer camp to strengthen leadership skills for students. Houston County EC also participates in the annual Government-in-Action Youth Tour, where we take our community's brightest young people to Washington, D.C., for a weeklong immersive experience of democracy in action. The trip is inspirational for many students, and we are humbled and honored to be a part of their leadership development.

Ultimately, the larger community benefits from these programs because of you. You empower the and its evolving needs. Together, let's continue making our corner of the world a better place.

We can't do it without you, and for that we're thankful for your membership.

NOTE: We inadvertently omitted a valued employee's name in last month's all-employee listing. We appreciate each employee at Houston County EC.

Tips for a Safe and Healthy Thanksgiving

HERE ARE SOME TIPS from Houston County Electric Cooperative to help keep your Thanksgiving celebration a little safer, healthier and more energy-efficient.

Preparing the Feast

Thawing a turkey? Planning ahead can make a big difference.

Put the still-wrapped bird on a tray to keep fluids from contaminating food in the refrigerator.

Thaw it in the refrigerator one day for every 4 pounds. That means you'll have to start thawing a 20-pound gobbler the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

Clean your stove and oven before you start cooking your holiday meal.

Use the self-cleaning mode on your oven just after you've used it to take advantage of the residual heat.

Make the kitchen off-limits to kids who aren't helping with the meal. This lessens chances of an accident.

Don't wear dangling jewelry or loose long sleeves while cooking. They could catch fire or snag pot handles.

Keep Thanksgiving decorations and kitchen clutter away from sources of direct heat.

Fry the Turkey, Not Yourself

Deep-frying a turkey can result in a juicy, crispy bird. The production can also go very wrong. Here are some tips to consider:

Don't try to deep-fry a turkey indoors. Use a propane-fired burner and deep pot made for frying.

Set the propane tank upwind away from the burner.

Position the fryer in an open area away from structures, trees and fences. Don't fry in a garage, carport or porch.

Make sure turkey skin is completely dry to prevent spatter burns. Ease the turkey into and out of the hot oil.

Keep a close eye on the oil temperature and turn off the burner if the oil begins to smoke.

If the oil catches fire, call 911 immediately. DO NOT try to put out the fire with water, which will only spread the flames.

Going to Memaw's?

If you're taking a toddler to a home that's not childproof:

Take medicines off bedside tables and out of unlocked drawers. Store them in a lockbox or on a high shelf. Iron pills or iron-fortified vitamins can pose a poisoning risk.

Bring along safety gates to block off any dangerous areas.

Make sure bathroom doors stay closed or block them off with a gate.

Watch out for small objects like coins or batteries that a curious youngster might swallow. If it can fit through a toilet paper tube, it's a choking hazard.

Traveling by plane? Don't forget the car seat.

Serve Up Energy Savings

With added holiday expenses, saving a little energy—and money—can be a big help.

Replace your lightbulbs with LED bulbs. Your guests won't notice a difference in lighting, but you'll see a difference in your bill.

Cook at least one dish from start to finish in the microwave, which uses about one-third of the electricity of a conventional oven. Slow cookers can help trim costs, too, and they don't add as much heat to the room as the oven.

Load the dishwasher completely full. With a mountain of dinner plates, using the dishwasher will be more efficient than handwashing.

Inspire Hope This Holiday Season

THE HOLIDAYS ARE A time for family, friends and giving. If you're looking for ways to bring more meaning to your holidays, these ideas are a great place to start.

Help out a neighbor. If you have a neighbor who needs help decorating, shopping or writing holiday cards, offer to lend a hand. This is also a great opportunity to get the whole family involved. Even young kids can pitch in to decorate—and help take the decorations down once the holidays are over.

Give gifts to teachers. Teachers work tirelessly all year long, and the holidays are the perfect time to show your thanks. Give a gift card, custom stationery, or a personalized water bottle or tote bag. Don't forget to include a handwritten note from your child expressing why they appreciate their teacher.

Invite friends to a holiday dinner. Do you know any friends, acquaintances or co-workers who live far from family? If they aren't traveling home, invite them over for a holiday dinner. If they decline your invitation, consider making a larger portion than you'll need, freezing the leftovers and dropping them by the next day.

Donate to giving trees. What's a giving tree? You might find one displayed in a grocery store, library, school or community center. A giving tree is typically decorated with wish lists from kids in the area. Pick a wish list from the tree, purchase the gift and return it to the sponsoring organization.

Volunteer. Other holiday-specific volunteer opportunities may include serving meals at a food bank or participating in a local toy drive. If you don't have the time to volunteer in person, you could sponsor a family instead. Many local organizations have holiday "adopt a family" programs, matching you with a family in need of basic necessities and gifts.

The holidays are a time filled with joy, but for some, they can be difficult. We hope that these tips inspire you to go out and make a difference in your neighbors' lives.

Green Chile Corn Casserole

4 tablespoons (½ stick) butter ½ cup onion, finely chopped 1 poblano pepper, finely chopped 1 pinch salt

- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1 egg, beaten
- 2 cans Mexi-corn (11 ounces each)
- 1 can cream corn (16 ounces)
- 3 cans diced green chiles (4 ounces each)
- 1 cup shredded sharp cheddar cheese, divided
- 1 cup shredded pepper jack cheese, divided
- 1 package corn muffin mix (9 ounces)
- Salt and fresh-ground black pepper, to taste

1. Melt butter in saucepan over medium-low heat. Add onion, poblano and salt and sweat until onion is soft and translucent, but not browned. Add garlic and cook for another 2–3 minutes. Set aside and let cool to room temperature.

2. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a large bowl, combine onion mixture, sour cream, egg, corn, green chiles and ½ cup of each cheese. Add the corn muffin mix and stir until moistened. Add salt and pepper to taste.

3. Pour mixture into a greased 2½quart round casserole dish. Bake 45 minutes. Remove from oven, top with remaining cheese, then return to oven for another 15 minutes, or until top is well browned.

Saltwater savvy and lifesaving skills keep beachgoers safe on the coast that Gene Gore loves

GENE GORE'S earliest memory of the ocean was a family trip to Galveston in the 1970s.

"Dad smashed us kids in the back of the station wagon with a loaf of bread," Gore says. "Once at the beach, Mom was floating on an inflatable raft, on a super calm day. I just remembered these little glassy waves peeling that caught my eye."

He never forgot those waves. How could he?

Gore grew up in southwest Houston, and his family had a beach house on the Bolivar Peninsula. When he knew his family was beach-bound, he would sprint the 2 miles home from school because he was so excited to go to the coast.

Like a lot of kids who grow up around the beach, Gore went on to become a lifeguard, working in Galveston. But unlike a lot of kids, he turned the beach into a career. And then a lifestyle.

After decades in the surf, Gore, now the owner of South Padre Surf Co., is a waterman—a master of the sea, sensitive to the ever-changing conditions of the ocean and the weather above it. And he uses his special abilities to help swimmers in distress.

In the 1980s, Gore went to Hawaii to compete in the U.S. Lifesaving Association National Lifeguard Championships. He found a greater purpose there.

"Back in Texas, lifeguarding is a seasonal occupation," Gore says. "During my Hawaii visit, I realized that lifeguarding was a year-round job, so in 1991, I bought a one-way plane ticket to Honolulu. I went to Hawaii to be a full-time lifeguard."

On the islands, Gore found not just lifeguards but watermen.

Bradley Melekian, writing for The Surfer's Journal in 2016, said that watermen are "men and women who not only know or knew how to do certain things in the ocean with incredible skill, but men and women who knew why they were doing these things, and dedicated their lives to existing in deep harmony and accordance with that profound sense of purpose."

That spoke to Gore. "In Hawaii, I worked my tail off and gained respect from the local Hawaiians," he says. "It's their territory, their country. I got to the point where Hawaiian waterman and lifeguard Brian Keaulana—his family is like Hawaiian royalty —would drop his kids off at the beach at my lifeguard tower. I had earned respect from the king." Eventually Gore returned to Texas to teach people how to surf, but he brought to Texas a lot more than surfing know-how.

While working as a surfing instructor around Isla Blanca Park on the southern tip of South Padre Island, Gore made more than 100 surf rescues on the Texas coast over the course of 10-plus years. He also recovered more than a dozen bodies from the surf. Rip currents are a major danger on Texas beaches, and many don't know how to swim out of a rip.

Gore says he started going to city council meetings, then county commissioners' meetings, to push for a lifeguard program. In 2008, South Padre Island Fire Department Beach Patrol was started as a pilot program, and Gore was the head lifeguard. Gore's children, Melia, 21, and Micah, 23, have been lifeguards there as well.

On South Padre Island, Gore also learned how to spearfish. "Spearfishing in the Gulf of Mexico off Texas beaches is amazing," he says. "Better than in Hawaii."

On days with clear water, he'll spearfish for mangrove snapper around the end of the jetties that protect the Brazos Santiago Pass ship channel.

"I love when I walk past all these rod-and-reel fishermen and jump in the ocean and see all these fish not paying attention to the lures and bait these fishermen put out there," he says. "Spearfishing is a lot more satisfying but a lot more dangerous."

Gore's knowledge of the sea helps Texans in other ways, too. He does consulting work for the local National Weather Service office in Brownsville.

For Gore, being a waterman means staying finely attuned to changing weather conditions, different cloud formations and the ocean's constant state of flux. For example, insects, especially dragonflies, appear in abundance when the winds are out of the west, he says. West winds here mean offshore winds, which are better for surfing.

"The most important thing I do as a waterman is to teach people to respect the ocean and its power," he says. "It's a delicate resource that needs to be preserved."

Waterman Gene Gore greets a new day at the end of the South Padre Island jetties.

Appraising the Texas Landscape

When Frederick Law Olmsted, designer of New York's Central Park, first laid eyes on a new state

BY W.F. STRONG

SOME SAY TIME TRAVEL will be possible one day, and some say it's the stuff of fairy tales.

For now, books are the next best thing. They can help us understand how people lived, thought and talked long ago, especially when they're written for the express purpose of cataloging such things.

Frederick Law Olmsted did exactly that when he toured Texas in the 1850s.

With his brother, he traveled a couple thousand miles around Texas on horseback, chronicling his experiences for the New-York Daily Times, a predecessor of The New York Times. His book, A Journey Through Texas: Or a Saddle-Trip on the Southwestern Frontier, is an absolute treasure—a priceless, time-sensitive ethnography that includes observations about and objections to slavery.

And it's more than a snapshot. It's an intricate mural of Texas around a decade after it became a state and as the U.S. headed toward civil war.

Many know Olmsted as the father of American landscape architecture. He designed New York's Central Park, the U.S. Capitol grounds and some 100 parks Listen as W.F. Strong narrates this story on our website.

and recreation grounds.

But before all that, Olmsted arrived in Nacogdoches in December 1853 and then meandered the state. He explored the Piney Woods, Hill Country, coastal plains, Southwest Texas and even some of northern Mexico.

When he arrived in Austin, population 3,000 back then, Olmsted found his hotel dirty and the food inedible. He was also dismayed that there was not one bookstore in town.

But he loved New Braunfels. The German communities and natural magnificence of the lands along the Guadalupe River were so impressive to Olmsted that he almost stayed. He was enchanted by the springtime wildflowers in the Hill Country, and he affirmed the German saying that "the sky is nearer in Texas."

Riding out west to Eagle Pass, Olmsted killed an enormous 5½-foot rattlesnake. Olmsted worried in the daytime that his horse would get bitten, and at night he worried that a rattler would snuggle up with him in his bedroll. He also saw his first horny toads and so loved the little creatures that he shipped some back home to New York to be kept as pets.

In San Antonio he fell in love with the river. "We are so struck by its beauty," he wrote. "It is of a rich blue and pure as crystal, flowing rapidly but noiselessly over pebbles and between reedy banks."

But Texas was still the Wild West, and gunfights were common in the plaza. "As the actors are under ... excitement, their aim is not apt to be of the most careful and sure, consequently, it is, not seldom, the passers-by who suffer," he wrote.

Maybe time travel is best done at the library after all. \bullet

Holiday Desserts

Fruity flavors rise to the occasion during the season of sharing

BY VIANNEY RODRIGUEZ, FOOD EDITOR

This delicious cake makes for a sweet ending to a holiday meal. Cranberry sauce baked into a vanillascented batter balances tart and sweet flavors to please palates that like a bit of both.

Cranberry Cake

3 eggs

- 2 cups sugar
- 3/4 cup (11/2 sticks) unsalted butter,
- room temperature
- 1¹/₂ teaspoons vanilla extract
- 2 tablespoons milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups flour
- 1 can whole berry cranberry sauce (14 ounces)
- 1/4 cup powdered sugar
- 1 cup cranberry jam, optional

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Liberally coat a 9-by-13-inch baking pan with non-stick cooking spray.

2. In a large bowl, beat eggs and sugar for 5 minutes, until eggs have increased in volume.

3. Add butter and vanilla and continue beating for an additional 2 minutes. Beat in milk and salt.

4. Stir in flour and then fold in cranberry sauce. Spoon into baking pan.

5. Bake 40 minutes or until a toothpick inserted comes out clean.

Mini Cherry Muffins ANN BASHARA GRAYSON-COLLIN EC

Mini muffins sweetened with maraschino cherries are the tastiest little holiday bites. Bashara's mother made these tiny treats every year for Christmas parties, and they soon became a family tradition.

4 tablespoons (½ stick) butter, room temperature, plus 2 tablespoons for buttering muffin pans
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup sugar
2 eggs, separated
1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon baking powder
1 jar maraschino cherries (10 ounces), drained, juice reserved
½ cup finely chopped pecans
1 cup powdered sugar, for dusting muffins

1. Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Grease mini muffin pans with butter.

2. In a medium bowl, cream butter and sugars until light and creamy. Slightly beat egg yolks and add to mixture along with flour, baking powder and 3 tablespoons of reserved cherry juice and blend.

3. Beat egg whites until light and fluffy. Gently fold into batter.

4. Sprinkle ¼ teaspoon of pecans into the bottom of each muffin tin. Spoon 1 teaspoon of batter over pecans, then place one cherry in center of batter. Top with an additional teaspoon of batter to cover cherries.

5. Bake 10–12 minutes.

6. Dust with powdered sugar and serve warm.

Over the River and Through the Woods

BY VIANNEY RODRIGUEZ

Tips for traveling with holiday treats:

Use muffin tins for deviled eggs, cupcakes and cold appetizers.

Frost and decorate cupcakes and cakes after you arrive to avoid smudges.

Add ice to a cooler before adding a cold dessert.

Wrap the entire cookie tray in plastic wrap to keep it secure.

When stacking frosted cookies, place waxed paper between each layer.

Place four toothpicks into your frosted cake then gently drape foil over the cake to protect frosting.

Use canning jars to transport sauces, fudge, cocoa mix and spiced nuts.

HIT THE ROAD

Kid Stuff

Legend has it that outlaw Billy the Kid lived out his days in Hico

BY CHET GARNER

I REMEMBER sitting around the campfire telling stories about the Wild West. Specifically, the story of how infamous gunslinger Billy the Kid outsmarted everyone and lived to old age in Hico under a fake name. Was it true? I headed to the small town southwest of Fort Worth to find out.

There are a couple things I do every time I'm in Hico. First I eat a chickenfried steak at Koffee Kup Family Restaurant, and then I buy pecan toffee from Wiseman House Chocolates. After that, I'm ready to investigate.

Hico's historic downtown is booming these days, and the Billy the Kid Museum is right in the middle of it. The museum archives all the stories of Hico's history and its infamous (alleged) resident.

I walked the displays and dug deep into the legend of Henry McCarty, aka William H. Bonney, aka Billy the Kid. It seems even his real name is up for debate. What is certain is that Billy was a notorious outlaw who stole cattle and gunned down many men across the Southwest.

Many say that lawman Pat Garrett shot and killed Billy in Fort Sumner, New Mexico, in 1881. There's even a grave in that town with his name on it. But some say Garrett granted Billy mercy on the condition that he promise to never kill again.

In the 1940s, a reporter with a hot tip tracked down a man named "Brushy Bill" Roberts in Hico. Brushy claimed he was indeed the outlaw, with the scars and stories to prove it. However, before he could receive an official pardon from the governor of New Mexico, he died of a heart attack. Many questions remain, but the folks in Hico believe it was Billy himself.

Take a trip to Hico, conduct your own investigation and decide for yourself. ●

ABOVE Billy the Kid, in sculpted form, maintains a presence in downtown Hico.

A School Day Like No Other

60 years ago this month, time stopped for Texans wherever they were

BY KATHLEEN COX RICHARDSON ILLUSTRATION BY STEPHANIE SHAFER ON NOVEMBER 21, 1963, the principal of Dolores School in South Austin told the teachers that President John F. Kennedy and his beautiful wife were coming to visit Austin. We were to take the children downtown from our Catholic school in the old yellow buses, stand along the main drag and wave to them as they drove through the city in an open car.

After lunch the next day, the children lined up in order in the parking lot, first grade up to eighth grade. They stood quietly, but I could sense a wave of controlled excitement rippling through us. This was an opportunity of a lifetime seeing our hero, our president.

All eyes were on the mother superior, our principal, while we watched for her signal to begin boarding the buses. "Mother, mother!" the school secretary called as she ran toward us. She whispered to the principal, handing her a transistor radio. Then Mother turned to us and said, "Gov. Connally has been shot. We're going into the church to pray for him."

Stunned, we turned around, still in orderly lines, first graders first.

We filed into the pews and knelt, hands clasped, heads bowed. Mother stood in front of us, holding the small radio close to her ear; we heard a muted voice but could not make out the words. Then she moved the radio away from her ear and said to us, her voice steady, "The president has been shot. Pray for the president."

A universal gasp coursed through the church. The little children squirmed as they knelt. The older girls began crying, softly. The radio continued its secret words. Little candle flames trembled in their blood-red holders, poised for news.

Then we heard the worst: "The president is dead. Pray for our president, John F. Kennedy"—all of this delivered by a calm, tearless woman. Shocked, I mumbled some sort of prayer, tears running down my face.

In orderly lines, we returned to our classrooms. With fearful eyes, my second graders stared at me. They knew something bad had happened but weren't sure what it was. A few of the girls began crying.

I swiped my face with a tissue and reassured them that I was OK. They returned to their seats. One of the boys raised his hand.

"Miss Cox."

"Yes, Jimmy."

"Does this mean we don't get out of school?"

"Yes, that's what it means."

A hushed "aw" came in unison from out of their innocent mouths. What did they know? They were so young; they didn't comprehend the impact of the horrible news.

Mother stopped by my classroom to tell me the children would be dismissed early.

Thank goodness. I didn't have to continue the facade. ■

1920s Style for a 1920s Price

It was a warm summer afternoon and my wife and I were mingling with the best of them. The occasion was a 1920s-themed party, and everyone was dressed to the nines. Parked on the manse's circular driveway was a beautiful classic convertible. It was here that I got the idea for our new 1920s Retrograde Watch.

Never ones to miss an opportunity, we carefully steadied our glasses of bubbly and climbed into the car's long front seat. Among the many opulent features on display was a series of dashboard dials that accentuated the car's lavish aura. One of those dials inspired our 1920s Retrograde Watch, a genuinely unique timepiece that marries timeless style with modern technology.

With its remarkable retrograde hour and minute indicators, sunburst guilloche face and precision movement, this design is truly one of a kind. What does retrograde mean? Instead of displaying the hands rotating on an axis like most watches, the hands sweep in a semicircle, then return to their starting point and begin all over again.

Retrograde watches by the big brands can set you back thousands; one recent offering from a big French fashion house is selling for more than $150,000! But because we've designed the 1920s Retrograde Watch in-house, we can offer it to you for just $99!

This watch is so wildly popular with our customers that we're actually concerned about running out; we only have 937 729 left for this ad!
